A day at home

Alice came home from school late today. As she unlocked the front door, Alice that today she would just lie on her sofa for an afternoon. She would do nothing but films. She would prefer to her friends, but they all lived in the city. Her parents moved out to a nice house in the suburbs because they didn't like the noise of Seattle. But Alice wanted to live in the city, especially on afternoons like this. She was free. She didn't have much homework, and there wasn't anything to do around the house. She could go to the movies, or the sports club, or the mall in a few minutes, if she lived in the city. But she was fine with staying at home too. She switched on the TV and a new film with her favourite actors.
